

Addressing Equity in the Context of COVID-19

The COVID-19 pandemic is having a profound impact on the health, social and economic well-being of people in Alberta. However, COVID-19 is disproportionately impacting certain populations. Social determinants of health such as race, gender, occupation and socio-economic status are factors that have the potential to increase both the risk and severity of COVID-19 infection.

Join the Alberta Public Health Association and the U of A's School of Public Health on December 15 from noon to 1:00pm to learn more about how the public health response in Alberta and current pandemic-related research at the SPH is addressing equity in the context of COVID-19. Alberta Public Health Association's AGM to immediately follow.
